Steinway raised the wages of their cabinet-makers to Fifty Dollars a week, and soon the gentle darlings struck for a twenty-five percent increase. Motormen on the Westchester line struck for Three Hundred and Fifty Dollars a month, and the public walked while they fought. (Recall what Shonts said about the public?) Two classes are working out the damnation of America at break-neck speed: The Laborer who has sold himself to the union in order to get an exorbitant wage wrhich he cannot earn (and the scorn of mankind, which he is rapidly earning) and the Commercial...
