Speech of Hon.: T. Polk, of Missouri, Delivered in the Senate of the United States, January 14, 1861 What is the condition of things all over the entire Confederacy, both North and South? Universal panic, prostration of credit, public and private. Why, Mr. President, our Government has just advertised for a loan of $5,000,000, and she could only get half of it bid for; nor even that except at usurious rates of interest, running up to the extreme of thirty-six per centum per annum. Failures and bankruptcies, stagnation and embarrassment everywhere and among all classes. Business languishing; trade crippled; commerce curtailed; industry paralyzed; artisans and mechanics idle for the want of employment; factories stopped and operatives discharged; suffering among the laboring poor; and families without necessities even now, and want and perhaps starvation, just before them in the future; and this glorious fabric of our Union even now tottering to its fall. Four of the pillars that sustained the lowering edifice are already removed; and among them, one of the original thirteen upon which it first reposed. Six others are on the point of being removed; soon to be followed, it may be, by half of the residue, including among the slaveholding States, the first and the last to come into the Union. Mr. President, the circumstances which surround us are enough to force us to pause and to ponder. And if we do so, we shall perceive the cold shadow of events still more startling coming upon us in the future. Even now a vision of civil war begins to rise up before us; but we are not...
