Excerpt: . . . responsibility to the school and to the public is: 1. To prove that the kindergarten is not an expensive luxury, that it can be maintained at a moderate cost and still fulfill its function. We need to do away with elaborate materials and long lists of equipment. Fortunately, a child's best development is often secured through such materials as a box, a piece of string, odds and ends of cloth or ribbon from his mother's workbag. 2. Kindergarten procedure must show that the kindergarten is a line illustration of the very principles of democracy which are needed for the rebuilding of the world. These are the principles we have (. . .) 1 (a) The right of the child to self-expression. (b) The need of developing the initiative of the individual, always balanced by the need for that individual to participate in the group--both because of what he has to give and what he may receive from the group. The practice of the kindergarten has had different emphasis at different times: 1. We have had marked emphasis on the teacher organized group--with practically the same standard of result for all in the actual objects made. 2. We have had an emphasis on the individual, his particular desires and impulses, and material has at times been used which cultivated the individual with little or no emphasis on the group. 3. Recently more attention has been paid to the self-organized group. There seem great possibilities here as...
